Paradigm launches new content platform

reference-global.com is now live

Boston/London/Warsaw – 1 October 2025 – Paradigm Publishing Services' new content platform – reference-global.com – is now live. The platform, which was developed in close cooperation with journal editors, librarians and partner presses, replaces and improves on sciendo.com.

reference-global.com allows researchers, librarians, academics, professionals, and students to access resources quickly and easily. It allows for content to be tailored and managed by libraries to create a customized digital library on one modern, fast, clear and intuitive platform.

Content on the new site includes more than 400 active OA journals, almost 10,000 eBooks (including more than 150 open access eBooks), conference materials (including more than 40 conference proceedings) and handbooks as well as tools to discover, organize and manage them. In the past year, almost 9,800 new titles have been added.

The platform includes:

- Advanced search and browsing through an AI-powered search tool. The tool allows for the searching of content in natural language, in multiple languages, and across full texts of books and articles to ensure the most accurate results.
- Enhanced journal presence - the new website design enables a clear and transparent presentation of the most relevant data, including journal history, peer review process and APC charges, enriched with advanced metrics and highlighting the publisher's brand and identity. The platform serves both open access and subscription journals.
- Personal reader area - built for an improved user experience, this feature allows users to organize their bookshelf by favorite titles, to create new title lists for different projects or subjects, to set customizable alerts and notifications for upcoming books, series updates, or new journal articles, and to access the full purchase history of acquired titles.

- Librarian portal - the new functionality supports simplified integration with library systems, collection and metadata management. The portal is fully COUNTER 5-compliant, offers downloadable KBART and MARC records for both individual titles and packages, and provides options to manage library consortia.

The platform bridges the gap between research and practice by featuring an extensive professional books collection from leading publishers that is perfect for students, teaching staff and professionals.
